

What is the Bundaberg Jobs Commitment?

The Bundaberg Jobs Commitment is about connecting employers with our youth to inspire and assist them in making decisions to pursue a life that includes work and education after they leave school.

It's also about providing employer-led opportunities for our youth to experience positive exposure to industry, local businesses, mentors, and other forms of career inspirations that will make a difference in their pathway to work or further education.

The Bundaberg Jobs Commitment aims to ensure that as youth in our region leave school, they have a clear understanding of available career opportunities, along with enough support and experiences to make choices that lead them on a pathway to employment.

Most importantly, it seeks to engage and inspire youth about their future.

How can you be involved?

We are asking employers to provide time in-kind to engage with our youth, through the Bundaberg Jobs Commitment. This can be as much or as little as you feel you can offer.

We are asking our youth, with their families, friends, and schools, to commit to engaging with employers through the Bundaberg Jobs Commitment.

The Bundaberg Jobs Commitment

A partnership between employers and our youth

A framework for engaging disengaged youth

Our approach to engaging with disengaged youth has four broad options, each designed for youth at differing stages of understanding and confidence about future career options.

Expose, Experience, Immerse and Launch describe the broad options, through which youth may participate in Bundaberg Jobs Commitment initiatives. Under each of these themes are options that have been designed for employers and schools to participate.

EXPOSE

Providing youth their first exposure to employers and work

EXPERIENCE

Providing youth their first experience in a workplace

IMMERSE

Providing youth with high impact, immersive experiences to inspire decisions

LAUNCH

Providing youth with tools and experience to start a career

In partnership with community organisations and local businesses, the Bundaberg Jobs Commitment deliver a range of programs and workshops for youth to learn about the importance of applying and presenting for employment.

Examples of these programs and workshops might be:

- Resume writing
- Selection criteria and cover letter
- Interview preparation
- Mock interviews
- Workplace responsibilities
- Expectations in the workplace (employer and employee)
- Developing soft skills (21st century skills)
- Industry presentations
- Immersive experiences including site tours and hands on learning.
